Salary Survey 2018: Country highlights

Market growth and a stable economic environment in Malaysia set to lead to active job market in 2018

The business environment is set to thrive in 2018 as companies that established operations in Malaysia in 2017 continue to grow. Shared services are expected to expand further, producing higher demand for talent in finance and accounting, IT, and supply chain and procurement.

This was among the key findings of the Robert Walters Salary Survey for 2018. The annual survey contains recruitment market updates, hiring advice and benchmarks salaries across our global markets.

Hiring trends in Malaysia

Tighter regulations from the Central Bank of Malaysia will continue to increase demand for credit risk and regulatory reporting talent. More companies will be seeking in-house legal counsels; mid-level legal practitioners and licensed company secretaries will also be needed.

Businesses may struggle to hire top IT talent, and there continues to be a high demand for software developers. As a result, quality candidates with niche tech skills are likely to receive multiple offers, in some cases, even after the first interview.

Organisations will also continue to attract overseas Malaysian talent (returning Malaysians) as their international experience is highly valued.
